NOUVELLES DE LA FEDERATION

En ce début d'année universitaire, j'aimerais faire un rapide tour d'horizon de la scène fédérale, et vous donner quelques nouvelles du CRSHC ainsi que de la Fédération.

SUR LA SCENE FEDERALE

Les élections fédérales. Même si le Premier Ministre garde le suspense quant à la date des prochaines élections, tout porte à croire qu'il déclenchera le processus à l'automne, plutôt que d'attendre au printemps 1989. Quoiqu'il en soit, la Fédération des sciences sociales a décidé d'organiser, conjointement avec le Consortium National des Sociétés Scientifiques et Pédagogiques, un grand débat entre les trois partis politiques, afin de les amener à préciser leurs programmes en ce qui a trait à la R&D, à l'éducation supérieure, à l'aide aux étudiants, etc... Le débat, qui sera couvert par les médias, aura lieu en octobre, à Ottawa.

Le Programme de Réseaux de Centres d'Excellence.

Comme vous le savez sans doute, le gouvernement a annoncé, en mai et juin derniers, la création d'un Programme national de réseaux de centres d'excellence. Je ne m'attarderai pas à décrire ce programme, qui a reçu une assez large publicité. Qu'il suffise de rappeler que le gouvernement compte y investir 240 millions de dollars, au cours des cinq prochaines années. Notre préoccupation première, en tant qu'organisme représentant les sciences sociales, a été de faire pression pour que le programme soit accessible à toutes les disciplines, et pour qu'il soit administré par les trois Conseils subventionnaires. Ce message a été répété maintes et maintes fois, en particulier lorsque la Fédération a comparu, avec la délégation du Consortium, devant le Comité de la Chambre sur la Recherche, la Science et la Technologie. Sur ces deux points, le gouvernement a donné satisfaction à la communauté universitaire, et je veux profiter de cette occasion pour remercier tous ceux et celles qui ont répondu à notre appel pour écrire ou téléphoner aux diverses instances décisionnelles.

Les budgets de base des Conseils de recherche. Sur ce chapitre également, on peut dire que le gouvernement s'est rendu, jusqu'à un certain point, aux représentations de la communauté universitaire. Une somme de 200 millions de dollars sera attribuée, au cours des cinq prochaines années, aux trois Conseils. Evidemment, cette somme est bien loin d'être suffisante pour doubler les budgets des trois Conseils, comme le recommandait, entre autres, le Comité consultatif national sur la science et la technologie, soutenu en cela par tous les organismes représentant les chercheurs-e-s. Ainsi, le CRSHC recevra un total cumulatif de 36 millions, sur cinq ans; le CRM recevra 61 millions, et le CRSNG, pour sa part, 103 millions. Même si les sommes paraissent importantes, elles permettront à peine de préserver les budgets de base des Conseils des effets de l'inflation, estimée à 4%. Tout ceci revient à dire que, dans le contexte électoral que nous vivons présentement, il convient de maintenir la pression auprès du gouvernement pour qu'il finance plus adéquatement la recherche.

Loi sur le droit d'auteur. Depuis la dernière Chronique, ce dossier a quelque peu progressé. Le 8 juin 1988, le projet de loi C-60 était adopté: cette première série d'amendements à la loi de 1924 est cependant loin d'être satisfaisante pour les usagers de documents protégés par le droit d'auteur. Nous avons donc continué à faire des représentations pour que la ministre Flora MacDonald dépose le plus vite possible, comme promis, la seconde série d'amendements qui soit assuré un meilleur équilibre entre les droits des créateurs et ceux des usagers. Dans une lettre qu'elle adressait au Président de la Fédération le 7 septembre, Mme MacDonald l'assurait que "the consultative committees on educational and library uses of copyright works, whose members represent institutions throughout the country, are currently working with departmental officials and it is expected that a consensus on all issues, including the points raised in your letter, will soon be reached. Please be assured that I intend to table the second set of amendments to the Copyright Act on a priority basis in the fall." Je vous tiendrai au courant des progrès accomplis dans ce dossier.

NOUVELLES DU CONSEIL DE RECHERCHES EN SCIENCES HUMAINES DU CANADA

Plusieurs groupes de travail du Conseil sont présentement en train de procéder à l'examen de certains programmes et à la définition de nouvelles orientations pour le CRSHC. Les rapports de ces divers groupes seront soumis au Conseil en décembre, et plusieurs des sujets à l'étude seront également débattus lors du Symposium qu'organiserait le Conseil, en janvier 1989, à l'occasion de son dixième anniversaire. J'aimerais passer brièvement l'état des travaux de ces divers comités.

Groupe de travail sur le programme de subventions de recherche. Sous la présidence de John Courtney, ce groupe procède à une ré-évaluation en profondeur du Programme de subventions de recherche. Un rapport intérimaire sera rendu public en octobre; le comité recevra les commentaires et réactions des intéressés en novembre et décembre, et il soumettra ses recommandations finales lors de la réunion du Conseil, en décembre. La Fédération a établi son propre groupe de travail sur cette question. Un premier mémoire sera déposé devant le comité Courtney incessamment, et, en octobre, la Fédération pourra également réagir au rapport préliminaire.

Groupe de travail sur les priorités. Vous vous souviendrez sans doute que ce groupe, présidé par Gilles Paquet, avait soumis un premier rapport préliminaire au Conseil en janvier 1988. Un deuxième rapport doit être remis au Conseil en octobre, après quoi il sera diffusé largement, de façon à ce que la communauté puisse offrir ses commentaires. Les conclusions du groupe seront l'objet de discussions au Conseil en décembre et, sans aucun doute, lors du Symposium de janvier.

Comité de révision des Bourses de recherche du Canada. Le CRSHC a confié à un groupe présidé par Geoffrey Lambert la tâche d'évaluer le fonctionnement et de faire des recommandations sur l'avenir de ce programme. Le groupe procède actuellement à une enquête auprès des boursiers et boursières, des universités et de quelques organisations nationales, dont la FCSS. C'est également en décembre que le Conseil recevra le rapport de ce comité.

Comité de révision des Fédérations et autres organisations nationales. Ce groupe est présidé par Frank Ledwell, et il a pour mandat d'évaluer le fonctionnement par le CRSHC des Fédérations et autres organismes tels que la Société Royale et l'ACFAS. Le groupe rendra public, fin octobre, un rapport intérimaire. Les discussions avec les organismes impliqués pourront se poursuivre en novembre, et les conclusions finales seront soumises au Conseil en décembre.

FEDERATION UPDATE

In this first Column of the academic year 1988-89, I will attempt to offer a brief overview of the situation on the federal scene and at the SSHRCC. I will also give you some brief news of the Federation.

FEDERAL SCENE

Federal election. Even though the Prime Minister has kept the population in suspense regarding the date of the next election, the current rumour is that he will schedule an election for this Fall, rather than wait for the Spring of 1989. In any event, the Social Science Federation will be organizing, jointly with the National Consortium of Scientific and Educational Societies, a major debate where the three political parties will be invited to outline their program regarding R&D, post-secondary education, student aid, etc... The debate will take place in October, in Ottawa, and will be covered by the media.

The Network of Centres of Excellence Program. As you all know, the Government announced, in May and June, details of the program for the establishment of Networks of Centres of Excellence. I will not deal at any length with this issue, which has been publicized widely. The Government will spend $240 million over the next five years on this program. As a Federation, we have been very active in lobbying the government on two principal issues: the opening of the program to all disciplines and the administration of the program by the three Granting Councils. When the Federation appeared, as part of a National Consortium delegation, before the House of Commons Committee on Research, Science and Technology (May 12, 1988), those two issues were addressed forcefully. On both counts, our efforts have paid off, and I wish to take this opportunity to thank all those who took the time to write or phone Ministers and government officials on this issue.

The Granting Council's Base-Budgets. Here again, the Government has listened, up to a point, to the representations of the scholarly community: a sum of $200 million over the next five years has been allocated to the three granting councils. This is a far cry from the doubling of the Councils' budgets over the next three years (this was, as you may remember, the recommendation of the NABST to the Prime Minister, and it had been endorsed by the scholarly community). The SSHRCC will receive a cumulative total of $36 million over five years, while the Medical Research Council will receive $61 million and the NSERC $103 million. Although not insignificant, this increase is, in fact, barely sufficient to keep up with an inflation rate of 4%. One must infer from this, not surprisingly, that we must continue, especially in view of the up-coming election, to put pressure on the government for a more adequate funding of university research.

Copyright legislation. Some progress has been made, since the Spring, on the revision of the Copyright legislation. Bill C-60, which contains a first series of amendments, was adopted and became law on June 8, 1988. The provisions of this first law do not, however, take into account sufficiently the needs and rights of the users of copyright material. The Federation, along with other national organizations, has therefore been pressing Minister Flora MacDonald to table, as soon as possible and as originally promised, a second series of amendments which will ensure reasonable access to copyright material. In a letter dated September 7, 1988, the Minister assures the SSFC that "the consultative committees on educational and library uses of copyright works, whose members represent institutions throughout the country, are currently working with departmental officials and it is expected that a consensus on all issues, including the points raised in your letter, will soon be reached. Please be assured that I intend to table the second set of amendments to the Copyright Act on a priority basis in the fall." I will keep you informed of any new developments.

NEWS FROM THE SOCIAL SCIENCES AND HUMANITIES RESEARCH COUNCIL

A number of SSHRCC groups are currently at work, reviewing programs or defining new priorities and orientations for the Council. It is expected that the Council will receive the reports of these working groups in December and that many of the larger issues will also be addressed during the Symposium that SSHRCC is holding on January 12, 1989, on the occasion of its 10th anniversary. What follows is a brief review of the various SSHRCC working groups.

Working group on the Research Grants Program. This group, chaired by John Courtney, is conducting an in-depth review of the Research Grants Program. An interim report is expected in early October. Reactions from the community will be sought during October and November, and a final set of recommendations submitted to the Council in December. The Federation has established its own working group to study this issue. A preliminary draft report will be submitted shortly to the SSHRCC Committee, and the Federation will naturally offer comments on the preliminary report, when it is published in October.

Working group on priorities. Chaired by Gilles Paquet, this group submitted a preliminary report to the Council in January 1988. A further report, which will incorporate the results of the recent consultation on SSHRCC's Strategic Programs, should be submitted to the Council in October and made public shortly afterwards. Here also, comments will be solicited, and it is expected that the final report will be studied by SSHRCC in December.

Canada Research Fellowships Review Committee. This new committee, chaired by Geoffrey Lambert, is currently surveying the universities, the first cohort of Fellows, and a few national organizations, including the SSFC, regarding the present functioning as well as the future orientation of the program. The final report of the Committee should be submitted to Council in December.

Federations and National Associations Review Committee. This working group is chaired by Frank Ledwell. Its mandate is to review the Council's funding of the Federations and other national organizations (Royal Society, ACFAS). A preliminary report should be published by the end of October, further consultations could be held, if necessary, in November, and a final report submitted to the Council in December.

Elections... L'élection au poste de Futur-président de la FCSS a été gagnée par Michel Allard. Il assumera ses fonctions en octobre, tout de suite après l'Assemblée générale annuelle... Conférence sur le curriculum de premier cycle. La Fédération organise, immédiatement après l'Assemblée générale annuelle, une conférence nationale sur le curriculum de premier cycle. Intitulée "Qui a peur de l'éducation libérale?", cette conférence regroupera un maximum de 150 personnes: nous avons voulu limiter ainsi les inscriptions de façon à favoriser les discussions, tant dans les plénières que dans les ateliers. Plusieurs conférenciers et conférencières de renom, dont Lise Bissonnette, présenteront des communications ou animeront des ateliers... Contacts avec les membres de la FCSS. Au cours des mois de mai et juin, j'ai eu le plaisir d'effectuer, avec le Président de la Fédération, plusieurs visites à nos universités-membres, au Québec. Nous avons également profité du Congrès des sociétés savantes pour rencontrer plusieurs associations. Ces rencontres sont d'une grande utilité pour les cadres et le personnel de la Fédération, en ce sens qu'elles nous donnent une connaissance de première main des problèmes vécus par les membres... Nouveau Bureau de direction, nouveau Directeur général. La composition du Bureau de direction, en 1988-1989, sera la suivante:

Présidente: Caroline ANDREW
 Futur président: Michel ALLARD
 Président sortant: Benoît DAIGLE
 Trésorier: Kenneth CRAIG
 Vice-Présidente, relations extérieures:
 Jane GASKELL
 Vice-Président, diffusion de la recherche:
 Jean CRETE
 Vice-Président, politique scientifique:
 Marshall Wm. CONLEY
 Ex Officio, Président de la FCEH:
 Thomas ROBINSON

De plus, je quitterai mes fonctions de Directeur général à la fin de septembre, après cinq ans de service. J'assumerai alors les fonctions de Directeur général du Conseil international d'études canadiennes. Un nouveau Directeur général a déjà été choisi: il s'agit de Steen Asbensen, professeur d'éducation à l'UQAH et Directeur de la Société canadienne pour l'étude de l'éducation. Il occupera ses nouvelles fonctions, d'abord à temps partiel, à compter du 3 octobre. Il se libérera progressivement de ses engagements envers l'UQAH et la SCEE au cours de l'automne, et il travaillera à plein temps pour la Fédération à partir de janvier 1989.

Elections... Michel Allard has been elected to the position of President-Elect of the Social Science Federation. His term begins in October, immediately after the annual meeting of the General Assembly... Conference on the undergraduate curriculum. Following its September 30, 1988. General Assembly meeting, the Social Science Federation is hosting a national conference on the undergraduate curriculum which is entitled: Who is afraid of liberal education? The attendance has been limited to 150 participants, so as to allow for productive discussions in the plenary sessions as well as in the five workshops. The keynote address will be given by Lise Bissonnette... Liaison with Federation members. In May and June, I had the opportunity to visit, with the President of the Federation, a number of universities in Québec, as well as meeting, during the Learned's, with many of our member associations. These meetings are a useful means of keeping in touch with our membership and they provide us with a first-hand knowledge of the concerns and problems of Canadian social scientists.

A new Executive Committee and a new Executive Director. As of September 30, 1988, the Executive Committee of the Federation will be composed as follows:

President: Caroline ANDREW
 President-Elect: Michel ALLARD
 Past-President: Benoît DAIGLE
 Treasurer: Kenneth CRAIG
 Vice-President, External Relations: Jane GASKELL
 Vice-President, Research Communication: Jean CRETE
 Vice-President, Science Policy:
 Marshall Wm. CONLEY
 Ex Officio, CFH President: Thomas ROBINSON

In addition, I will be leaving the Federation, at the end of five years of service. I have accepted a new position as Executive Director of the International Council for Canadian Studies. I will be replaced, starting October 3, 1988, by Steen Esbensen, Professor of Education, Université du Québec à Hull, and Director of the Canadian Society for the Study of Education. Steen will work part-time for the SSFC, while he completes his commitments with the University and the CSSE, and he will begin work on a full-time basis as of January 1989.

A TRIBUTE TO GEORGE GRANT

by Peter Emberley, Carleton University

George Grant was one of the great political thinkers of our age. If there is now a fertile terrain for political thought in Canada, it is in considerable measure due to his influence. He has made it possible for Canadians to think about the vision and experiences of the good that constitute their unique destiny.

But this is in no way to say that his greatness is confined to reflections on our distinctive fate. His powerfully evocative images and symbols were always intended to elicit those experiences which permit the occasional and rare transcendence of our historical situation. Love of the ancestral could in no way stand in for love of the good. His thought has been a vehicle for thinking through the universal themes of Western philosophy--law and justice, reason and revelation, language and power--and permitting us to see how our particular ways of life, understandings, and practices are necessarily invested with them.

Three annoying misconceptions about Grant's work need to be laid to rest at this time. The first is the recurring desire to label Grant as a "conservative," "nationalist," "pessimist," or "Red Tory."

Like a Platonic dialogue, each of Grant's writings is a specific cosmion. In each, Grant assumes a persona whose appearance can only be gauged by the desires, expectations, and abilities of the interlocutors or readers involved in the situation at hand. The persona is a mask which permits both ironic dissembling and the intimation of some profound tension. When Grant writes about the logic of empires, the sophistry of idealogues, or technological domination, he does so not as a provincial, a reactionary, or a Luddite. Instead, his reflections are intended to direct us towards the tension of our being--between our imperfection and rare intimations of perfection, between our bodies and our souls, between the good and one's own, between ignorance and the experience of meaning. Woven throughout all his reflections--those on Diefenbaker, on abortion, on technology as destiny, on Celine, and on Vietnam--is, in fact, a meticulous sensitivity not only to the existential tension of our being, but also to the tension that constitutes the ontological context of our quest for meaning. As a good "Platonist," Grant understood that the meaning of being is received and consented to by attention to particular things. By writing on what was closest, he sought to evoke the tension between these and the highest things.

The second misconception is that Grant's work is not philosophic. This view has currency because his work is purportedly not "systematic," or does not make the appropriate gestures towards "traditional" scholarship.

But to respond to this charge, Grant's works are "meditations," elaborately construed thought-trains whose powerful images are intended to cause recollection of fundamental experiences. Moreover, as a "public" philosopher, Grant has always written in a language that could be discussed and judged within the confines of common sense. Eschewing the technical jargon of "professional" philosophers has not meant a reduction in profundity of meaning, but instead has implied a recognition of the comity of mankind in its common ability to speak to the most important things. To be sure, this has not meant that, in the last analysis, common sense has not had to have recourse to the originating experiences to which it practically gives voice.

Grant's meditations finally lead to the highest philosophic themes, but in his accounting of these matters, one must ascend to them from the vernacular in which he speaks, but which always points beyond itself. Only partisan commitment to the contemporary protocols of the discipline of philosophy would lead one to declare Grant's work "unphilosophic."

The third misconception runs in the opposite direction. Here Grant is identified with the type of secluded philosopher in an Epicurean garden whose inner sanctum can be accessed only by initiates. Some of those from whom Grant learned most seem to advance such a conception of philosophy. The inappropriateness of such a view can be measured by considering Grant's incisive assessment of Strauss and Kojève, and his clear assertion that the highest virtue is charity. Grant, unlike Strauss, does not believe that the political world needs to be governed by noble lies and preserved by ironic silences and salutary interventions. On the contrary, our political and moral duties can be recognized by the use of our reason, and the contemplative insights we have into divine goodness are intended to provide measures for governing our political worlds.

Needless to say, while accepting this Christian reconciliation of time and eternity and thus bringing philosophy down from the skies, Grant does not permit his reflections to derail into the immanentist, eschatological dreams of Kojève's Hegel. Man, in Grant's account, remains a creature and steward in the cosmos, and creation ex nihilo is left to the gods. He avoids the two lures of gnosticism--contempt for the world and exaggerated expectations of the mind's capacity. Accommodation to the world as it is, and thus the virtue of moderation, rather than defiance to the world as it appears, and hence the passion of innovation, was Grant's enduring principle. But this could be sustained only by philosophy-at-work in minding the business of the world.

The failure to transcend these misconceptions renders it impossible to enter into rational conversation with Grant and to assess properly the enduring importance of his work. To think along with Grant requires imaginatively enacting experiences which guide us to the core of our humanness.

In Lament for a Nation (1965), Grant asked us to reflect on the ambiguity of Canada's effort to retain a distinctive way of life and orientation in the world in the midst of integrative continental powers. Liberal contractualism, in no way confined merely to the United States, had usurped the possibility of a way of life whose conditions were not subject to negotiation and pragmatic bargaining. The study, overtly on the demise of Diefenbaker, pointed to the philosophic themes that would preoccupy him throughout his life. This was followed the next year by Philosophy in the Mass Age, in which Grant believed it might be possible to forge a synthesis between the awe and reverence of antiquity on the one hand and the extraordinary technical achievements of modernity on the other. At its best, such a synthesis, he believed, would permit the universalization of a just moral order. The expectation of bringing these together, permitting both our creatureliness and our creativity to inhabit the same domain, was however a false hope. Technology and Empire consisted of meditations on the unquestioning submission to the universalizing and homogenizing forces of technology. The promise of modernity, and one might say the worldly expectations of Christianity, had miscarried into a bland, passionless mediocrity. In Time as History, Grant explored the unfolding of our destiny--as beings denied access to eternity while embarked on a resolute path towards some culminating historical moment--to its Nietzschean conclusion and reflected on the burden which was acquired from Nietzsche's legacy. In English-Speaking Justice (1974), Grant brought together years of inquiry into the modern account of knowledge and its impotence in providing us with a firm measure in judging what we might do with our awesome technological ability. Finally, in Technology and Justice, Grant set out as starkly as possible the antinomy of what was being demanded of us in our technological being-in-the-world on the one hand, and wherein our "owingness" might lie on the other hand.

In sum, what animates all these reflections is a desire to explore the highest and the lowest in the two major shaping forces of the West. Grant's unique achievement was to set out the terrain upon which the intersection of Jerusalem and Athens--of revealed religion and classical rationalism--could be explored. In so doing, he--like Leo Strauss--set out a map for those for whom political philosophy was still a possibility. Unlike Strauss, Grant believed that philosophy could be morally edifying. By focusing his theoretical analysis on the faculty of the will, Grant's anthropology contained comprehensive accounts of human spontaneity, love, and commitment, as well as the hope which accompanies our recognition of contingency and newness. In this, his accomplishment is to leave us with a spirit of courage, but also forgiveness, with which to respond to our dark times.

George Grant's death is for many friends a personal loss, but for us all a tragic reminder of our mortality. It is also, however, an opportunity to recall how brief is the sojourn we are given in which we may attempt to open a clearing for the revelation of the good. With Grant we have learned the important conjunction of tradition and transcendence; we have learned not to break faith with what preceded us, and how such recollection allows us to make of our lives a living testimony to the privileged human capacity to intimate divine goodness.
